

“My Vincent Van Gogh”

Vincent Van Gogh was born in Holland in 1853. He was a post-impressionist painter that became one of the most famous painters in the world. After his brother’s advice, Theo’s , he began to take up painting seriously.

Vincent was financially unstable and, surprisingly, his paintings were sold only after his death. Moreover, he suffered from anxiety, depression and epilepsy but that did not stop him from continuing to draw majestic paintings.

His mental illness burdened his social ability and made him a difficult companion. He distanced himself from others so that he could find his peace and calmness. Also he was not hopeful about life and truly believed that he would only find rest and peace only after his death.

So, one day he thought about his never lasting sadness and he could do nothing but end his life.
